"GIVING ANIMALS A SECOND CHANCE AT LIFE AND LOVE"

BABIES NEED SPECIAL CARE!

It's puppy and kitten season at Harbor Humane Society. More arrive daily. Your IMMEDIATE help is needed!

Jeffrey and Theodore are 8 week old beagles, left to fend for themselves. A Good Samaritan found them and brought them to our shelter. When they arrived, they were so sick we didn't think they could possibly survive. Testing showed that both puppies were infected with coccidian, a dangerous parasite. However, we didn't give up on these precious babies! Our medical team immediately began a rigorous treatment. The puppies are responding to the medications which your support provides. We are happy to report that while both puppies are still ill, they are improving steadily with each passing day. We now believe that these dogs have a future and look forward to finding them their forever home.

We can't save puppies like Jeffrey and Theodore without your help. Won't you send a check today? Their lives are precious.

(please flip to other side)

Stella is a 3 ½ month old lab puppy. She arrived, suffering from severe chemical burns all down her back, the result of abuse. Weak and in pain, she was listless and appeared to have given up. But Harbor Humane staff wouldn't give up on Stella, even though it looked as if she had given up on herself. Treatment began immediately to make her more comfortable, and to begin the healing process. Stella gets a little better every day. Her eyes now glow with hope and her tail wags as she looks forward to the time when a new family will prove to her that life doesn't have to be harsh and cruel. Instead, she will be loved and cherished and pampered forever.

Some animals have only known cruelty and abuse. With your support, we heal their wounds and place them into a loving forever home. We also help law enforcement officers bring abusers to justice and provide community education on responsible pet ownership.

Won't you support our efforts with a gift today?

Pet overpopulation is a reality. The spaying and neutering of pets has never been more important. Currently, seven mother cats with their litters are being cared for at our shelter. Motherless kittens and puppies are left at our building every day. Some are too young to be away from their mothers.

But Harbor Humane values life, and we won't give up on them. We place these young orphans into foster homes where volunteers bottle feed them around the clock for weeks until they are strong enough to eat on their own. They cuddle and reassure them, knowing that love and reassurance at this young age is essential for survival. Medical care and special food help them grow and develop.

But this onslaught of puppies and kittens puts a real drain on our resources. And we depend on your compassionate support to help us save their lives.

Please be generous!

We currently care for over 300 animals at our shelter. They all need food, medical care and love.

But our babies need extra special care and there are so many this time of year! Please send your gift today!

Little lives depend on you.

Thank you for giving our babies a second chance at life and love!

Gratefully,

Sue Ann Culp
